RUN

ZOOT SPORTS ULTRA RACE SHOE, $130

Get in and get out of transition with Zoot's—and the industry's—first triathlon-specific running shoe. BareFit Technology and an antimicrobial lining help reduce hot spots and blisters, allowing for sockless wear and one less step in transition. Speedy, single-handed entry shaves precious seconds thanks to the quick-lace system. zootsports.com

DESOTO FORZA TRI SUIT, $128

Gone are the days of constricting one-piece tri suits. The new hourglass-fit of the Forza is distinctively cut for a woman. The long, flowing lines eliminate unwanted bulk. Paired with the Lycra Power construction and Skin Cooler stretch panels, the Forza delivers sleek speed and a comfortable fit. desotosport.com

ORCA SPORTIVE VISOR, $18

A visor may not be the most high-tech piece of equipment for the run, but you'll notice if it's not doing the job. The Sportive's internal sweatband soaks up sweat and sunscreen before they have a chance to burn your eyes. The rear, adjustable Velcro clasp comfortably accommodates any size head. orca.com

TYR RACE BELT, $8

Attach your bib number to your body in a less permanent—and sometimes less painful—way by wearing a race belt rather than safety pinning it to your race kit. TYR's adjustable elastic belt features buttons that easily snap over race numbers. One size fits most. Try a bold new red belt, or stick with the basic black. tyr.com

TREK EQUINOX 7 WSD, $1,870

The Equinox 7 is one tricked-out ride that won't suck your savings account dry. A highly shaped top tube provides a 20 percent increase in lateral stiffness at the head tube (compared to the previous design) and the frame-and-fork interface presents a virtual continuous surface for superior aerodynamics. Plus, it's made for women, with specific geometry and fit to achieve proper balance between the hands and hips for better control and comfort. trekbikes.com

2XU ENDURANCE TRI SUIT, $110

2XU stepped up its technology by incorporating breathable compression materials into its Endurance Tri Suit. The quick-drying SBR SKIN fabric compresses muscles for reduced fatigue, while mesh side panels keep you cool. Three rear pockets mean nutrition is within arm's reach. 2XU.com

SHIMANO ALL-AROUND SPORT AND FITNESS ROAD CYCLING SHOE SH-R085W, $100

Your feet are outlets for your leg strength on the bike. Comfortable cycling shoes are key to a smooth, strong and comfortable power transfer from muscle to cadence. Shimano's All-Around road shoe features a micro-adjustable buckle for quick, subtle adjustments and a fiberglass-reinforced nylon outsole for just the right amount of stiffness. The effect: comfort and power. Compatible with SPD and SPD-SL cleats. shimano.com

SPECIALIZED WOMEN'S DECIBEL HELMET, $170

You won't be a hothead with Specialized's foam-engineered and carbon-reinforced cooling system. It features larger, deeper vents without sacrificing cranial protection. Clip on the visor for extra protection from the sun's UV rays. specialized.com

OAKLEY RADAR SUNGLASSES, STARTING AT $155

Long training days outside don't just take their toll on your skin. Keep your eyes healthy with Oakley's super-lightweight Radars, which filter out 100 percent of UVA, UVB and UVC rays. Whether running or cycling, the lenses protect against impact, gravel, bugs and even tree branches. oakley.com
